ABOUT

At Books For Africa, we believe that education is the great equalizer in the world, and books are at the foundation of a strong educational system. For many in Africa, the gift of books truly is a gift of hope.

The Jack Mason Law & Democracy Initiative was launched by Books For Africa to address Africa's appalling scarcity of law and human rights books, and by doing so, to further the rule of law in Africa.

HOW WE'RE MAKING A DIFFERENCE

Since its inception, the Law & Democracy Initiative has supplied law books to Liberia, Rwanda, Tanzania, Cameroon, Sierra Leone, and Zimbabwe.

The legal businesses of Thomson Reuters and many law firms and law schools have generously agreed to donate the needed legal texts. By coming together, we are sourcing complete law libraries, in addition to individual text books, to the nearly 200 law schools in Africa and to bar associations, court systems, justice agencies, and legal or human rights nonprofit organizations.

With your support we can help spread the rule of law across many more African nations.

HOW YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

The Law & Democracy Initiative needs law firms, law schools, individuals, and corporations working together to support the shipping of high-quality, up-to-date law books to Africa.

There are three ways to help:

1. Mail your financial contribution to:
