Giving back to the world we travel

“Every book is a journey waiting to be unravelled” “Once you learn to read, you will be forever free”

Recently, we partnered with Libraries for Kids International and Books for Africa to fund the shipment of a 40-foot container of books from the USA to the heart of Maasai land in Amboseli, Kenya. Many of our Overseas Adventure Travelers visit one of the four schools supported by the Grand Circle Foundation, and their generosity has been instrumental in making this project possible.

So, what does a 40-foot container of books mean? It translates to over 36,500 books—nearly 10,000 books for each school. This incredible initiative aligns with our goal of ensuring every child receives a book to take home for the holidays. We explained to the families that in their bomas, where many share resources, they could swap books among themselves, enabling them to read not just one, but potentially 30 different books!

This was our starting point: to give every child a book—a gift that keeps on giving. In the new year, we will unpack thousands more books and set up libraries in each school.

As always, projects like this rely on funding and donations. Thank you to everyone who believes that books equal possibilities. They open doors to new worlds and empower education. In Amboseli, your support has given thousands of children the rare chance to own a book and access countless more.
